

A RICH PAST
A PROMISING FUTURE

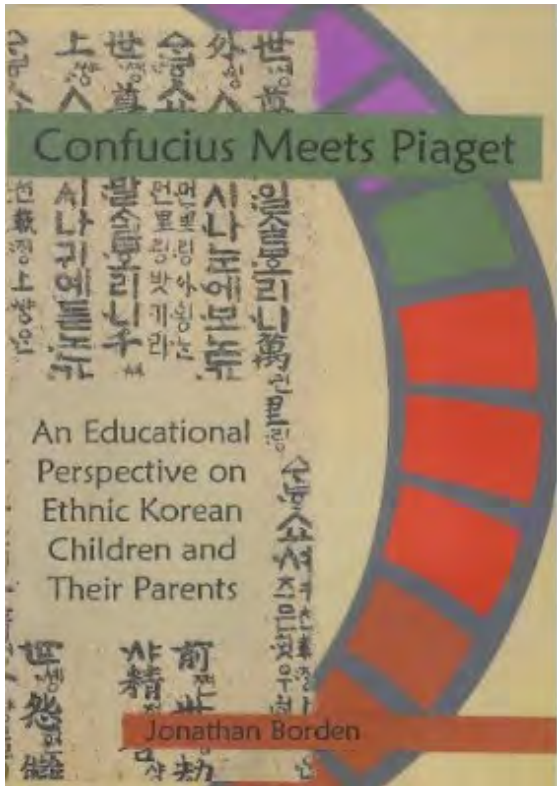

Shanghai American School is proud to host

Confucius Meets Piaget

An Educational Perspective on Ethnic Korean Children and Their Parents

Saturday, February 25, 2012

Dr. Jonathan Borden, Lecturer

Participants will:

- Explore cultural stereotyping
- Discuss Eastern and Western Behavioral Value Systems
- Examine the challenges inherent in the convergence of Confucian and Western concepts of harmony and conflict and their implications for students and their teachers
- Learn about Confucianism as a social structure and its implications for family and educational structure
- Analyze the implications of the expatriate experience for Chinese, Korean, and other East Asian students
- Suggest applications for working with East Asian students in their academic and social lives as well as how to work with their parents in building relationships

Lecturer: Dr. Jonathan Borden

Dr. Borden is a proud father who raised two boys with his wife of 30+ years, Soon-Ok Pakh Borden. Their sons, Patrick and Eugene, grew up in Korea while Dad served as Secondary Principal at Seoul Foreign School. Jon arrived at Shanghai American school in the 2005 academic year and “raised” the Middle/High school to a well-respected, IB/AP college preparatory institution worthy of WASC and IBO Reauthorization accolades. In addition to his principalship, he supports the Shanghai American School through service on the Human Resource Committee, the Strategic Planning Curriculum Action Team, the Language Policy Task Force and serves as a liaison to the JinQiao Community Center.

Jon has a voracious appetite for literature and enjoys traveling through East Asia and Europe, as well as offering workshops regarding adjustment issues of Asian students attending International Schools. He received his PhD in Early Adolescence and International Education from Walden University. He received his administrative certificate from University of Connecticut, his M.S. in Education from University of Southern California, and his B.A. from Bridgewater State College in Massachusetts.

Jon’s position advocacy for students permeates this seminar, as he encourages an understanding of the students’ perspective and pressures in an international educational setting. Anyone who works with students of East Asian heritage should experience this seminar at least once.
